POETS CORNER.

THE WAYSIDE DREAM

BY J. BAYARD TAYLOR.

THE deep and lordly Danube Goes winding far below :-I see the white-walled hamlets Amid his vineyards glow, And southward, through the ether, shine The Styrian hills of snow.

O'er many a league of landscape Sleeps the warm haze of noon : The wooing winds come freighted With fragrant gales of June. And down amid the corn and flowers I hear the water's tune.

The meadow-lark is singing As if it still were morn : Sounds through the dark pine forest The hunter's dreamy horn : And the shy cuckoo's plaining note Mocks the maidens in the corn.

I watch the cloud armada Go sailing up the sky, Lulled by the murmering mountain-grass, Upon whose bed I lie, And the faint sound of noonday chimes That in the distance die !

A warm and drowsy sweetness Is stealing o'er my brain; I see no more the Danube Sweep through his royal plain-I hear no more the peasant-girls Singing amid the grain !

Soft, silvery wings, a moment Seem resting on my brow : Again I hear the water, But its voice is deeper now, And the mocking bird and oriole Are singing on the bough!

The elm and linden branches Droop close and dark o'erhead. And the foaming torest brooklet Leaps down its rocky bed; Be still, my heart ! the seas are passed-The paths of home I tread!

The showers of c camy blossoms Are on the linden spray, And down the clover neadow They heap the scented hay. And glad winds toss the forest-leaves All the bright amount day Old playmates ! bid me welcom Amid your brother band! Give me the old affection-The glowing grasp of hand ! I worship no more the realms of old-Here is my Futherland!

Come hither, gentle maiden. Who weep'st in tender joy! The ra ture of thy presence O'ercomes the world's annoy, And calms the wild and throbbing heart Which warms the war dering boy.

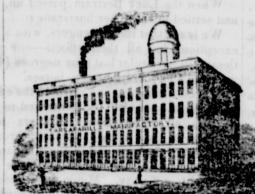

In many a mountain fastness-By many a river's foam, And through the gorgeous cities, 'Twas loneliness to roam. For the sweetest music in my heart

Was the olden songs of home ! Ah! glen, and feaming brooklet. And friends, have vanished now! The balmy Styrian breezes Are blowing on my brow, And sounds again the cuckoo's call From the forest's inmost bough.

Veiled is the heart's glad vision-The wings of fancy fold : I rise and journey onwa d. Through valleys green and old, Where the far white Alps reveal the morn And keep the sunset's gold !

THE RETURN.

"A mighty power hast thou, oh ! love ! To rouse the very soul, And to awaken that which slept Beyond our own control"

" Well girls, how have you enjoyed your walk," enquired Miss Clifton, as they bounded into the room with flushed cheeks, swinging their bonnets in their hands "Oh, charmingly," they replied, but Aunt Marietta, please inform us who that letter is from that you hold in your hand." "Why, sister, said Henrietta, trying to speak reprovingly, you ought not inquire into Aunt's affairs. The letter of course is from some one of her admirers."--"No, my dear," replied Miss Clifton, "it is from a stranger. I will read its contents, and then you will be just as well acquainted with its author as myself."

KEEPING FARM ACCOUNTS .- Let any farmer make the experiment, and he will find it as interesting as it is useful to know from year to year the actual produce of his farm. Let everything, therefore, which that which cannot be brought to an exact standard, be estimated as if he himself were about to sell or purchase it. Let him likewise, as near as possible, measure the ground which he uses, and the manner in which he applies it. The labor of doing this is nothing compared with the satisfaction of having done it and the benefits these cases, is perfectly wild and uncertain, varying often, with different individuals, almost a hundred per cent. Exactness enables a man to form conclusions, which may most essentially, and in innumerable ways, evail to advantage. It is that alone which can give any value to his experience. It is that which will make his experience the sure basis of improvement; it will put it in his power to give safe council to his he can securely place confidence in himself .- Norristown Herald.

SALT YOUR STOCK .- Every person is aware of the beneficial effects of salt upon the human system Salt was held by the ancients in the highest estimation, and most persons have experienced how insipid and unwholesome meat and vegetables are when prepared or cooked without, or with only an insufficient supply. Horses, cattle and sheep, and, in short, all domestic animals, should be regularly supplied with it at all seasons. The liberal use of this mineral improves their condition, and promotes their general health; and, when they have acquired a habit of partaking of it frequently, there is no danger to be apprehended digestion, and destroys or dislodges worms, which at some seasons, effect a lodgement in the stomach and alimentary capal.

We have most of us, probably, had occasion to witness the avidity with which wild, undomesticated animals seek the creeks and estuaries which indent the shores of the ocean-the "salt licks"-and what long journeys, and dangers and difficulties they will encounter to reach them. This is the result of pure instinct, and is not to be attributed to caprice solely, as some have supposed. Horses, sheep, neat cattle and swine are all eager for this substance, and cannot be maintained in a healthy and thriving condition without it. The former it has been remarked, when constantly and liberally supplied with salt, are seldom, if ever, victimized by the botts, or affected with that scarcely less troublesome disease -the cholic. In the salting of sheep, esthe green, succulent, and consequently fermentable nature of the food to which they are restricted, renders a full provision of salt indispensably necessary, I have found it advisable to have a shed provided, and fitted with a range of boxes in which salt can be constantly kept, and to which the animals can at all times have free access .-

"Well," said he "bad company is better than none-make haste." After jogging on five or six miles, the gentleman asked if they had not come to the road he must take. "Oh, yes." said she, BIRTH DAYS .- From the moment in "we have passed it two or three miles back, but we will strive to forget the twelve which childhood leaves us, we begin to but I thought bad company was better than none, so I kept you along with me."

EXTENSIVE FORGERIES In Boston.

State street is the theatre of immense excitement this morning, owing to the develepment of forgeries to a heavy amount, which have just come to light. A though and rumors are in circulation-money changers look excited, and there is a hurrying to and fro among the "street brokers" which portends that something extraordinary has happened.

From inquiry into the causes of this unusual excitement, we learn that forgeries to an indefinite amount-certainly to the amount of $55,000-have recently been contractor on the Rutland, (Vt.) Railroad. In Stonington, Ct., on Monday last, by the Rev. and a great many much less than can be bought which has been paid, and that the dishenest

Dr. Jayne : Sir-I take great pleasure in informng you that the bottle of Hair Tonic which I obtained of you last October, has proved most sat-sfactory and successful. My hair had for a long time been exceedingly thin, but for two or three years past it had so fallen out that my head had become almost entirely bald. I was under the necessity of concealing the baldness by coming the hair on the sides over it. But now, after usng a bottle of the Tonic, I have as luxuriant a growth of hair as I ever had. C. C.
